Public Networks

Free Internet that you can access from anywhere is great! But be careful when using a public network because they don't ensure your privacy nor security.

SECURITY

Data Leakage

Large data leaks have happened on the Internet, so stay tuned and make sure your personal data has not been leaked. After leaks, data breach attempts increase. Pay extra attention to detect scams and adopt possible mitigation measures!

Be careful with the information you share

Are you going to share your photos online? Make sure no important information is on them. Do not show your address, license plate, ID details, and credit cards numbers. Stop ill-natured people from using these images to cause you harm.

Description

Expressing yourself and voicing your opinions to a large number of people has never been as easy as it is now. Increasingly, apps and social networks emerge and allow users to post content and communicate with a few clicks on the Internet. Many consider this to be an incredible innovation in human communication, contributing to increased freedom of expression.

However, you must be careful when creating or sharing content and expressing your opinion. Because they have no scientific basis or have not been confirmed to be true, certain statements can be harmful. These are called rumors. Before sharing, ask yourself: Is this information really true? Do not rely only on common sense. Check the source of the information – investigate and confirm.

Help fight rumors. Only share information if you are really sure of its veracity. When in doubt, do not share.
